

The whole point of the "do not call" list is to stop being bothered by telemarketers. This is voluntary. If I wanted to be pestered by telemarketers, I would never have signed up for this list. Telemarketing calls are an invasion of my time, my personal phone lines, and my home. Revoking the ability to remain unharrassed is a violation. I was never so elated when I could finally have these types of people leave me alone. Allowing the phone calls to start again is opening ALL of you (FCC, banks, etc.) to lawsuits. This will open a big can of worms that I don't think anyone will expect. This matter must be reconsidered and the law must be upheld. This doesn't affect the big guys in the corporations, it affects us little people. Stand up for us.
